A PHOTOGRAPH FROM LIFE.

Great excitement was caused on a certain day in the usually quiet household of M. Borno by a letter from the married daughter, Mme. Artols, who resided in Rome, in which she informed her parents that a suitor for her sister Elise would soon appear at Villefleurs. And she further told them that this M. A. de Villani, a young man of good birth and with a comfortable fortune, had been struck with a photograph in a shopwindow-so struck and charmed that he feit he must try every means to win the original for his wife. This photograph turned out to be one of her young sisters that she had sent to be copied, and seeing that the young man was in earnest she bad promised to write and introduce him as an unexceptionable parti. Mme. Artois wound up by reminding ner father that Elise was no longer a girl, and that, in fact, it would be very foolish not to accept this bit of good brought a bright and becoming color to her fortune.

It was therefore agreed, in a family conclave, the fair Elise consenting, and with be angry.
